

CHANCERY NOTICE.

THE REVIEW.

JACK &amp; HINE, Proprietors.

It would seem that Providence is showering good things in great abundance on the democracy. Latest reports indicate a democratic majority in both houses of the Illinois General Assembly and the election of a democrat to succeed Gen. Logan in the United States Senate. It is said that trouble never comes singly—upon the republicans.

PLUMES are now selling at low figures.

It is now said that the red sunsets were the signs of a democratic victory.

WHEN our republican friends order oysters, they will not take New York "counts."

PRESIDENT ARTHUR is now supposed to be engaged in the valedictory of the grand old party.

The heads of the various departments at Washington are now putting the finishing touches to their final reports.

The poor prohibitionists are now the objects of such abuse from the rebels that if the latter are not anxious, the St. John people will not take them in four years hence.

BILLY MARSHALL and Harry Biddlebaugher, of Virginia, as republicans held the balance of power in the United States senate for two years and yet our neighbors are scared at the result.

The republicans are wonderfully afraid the democrats can not find men enough to fill the federal offices who can write. They need not worry. They can write, and will right the wrongs of the people.

It is now dawning on the minds of numerous republican statesmen that Blaine was "stabbed in the house of friends." The opinion has prepared for some time that the foul slayings of Rev. Bull and Dr. Burhard did him no good in his struggle for the presidency.

The Boston Herald says that the republicans above named having been stoned in the course of their tour in the state of Maine, it is evident that the rebels have not been able to get the best of them. But the rebels themselves are to blame for the attack on the Boston Herald. The Boston Herald is a newspaper of the people, and the rebels are to blame for the attack on the Boston Herald.

A FELLOW named Yates had a screed in the Herald yesterday concerning his action of himself and others at the democratic demonstration in Cerro Gordo a few nights ago. The information on which our local notice of him was based, was from half a dozen of the best men of Cerro Gordo. If there could have been any doubt about Yates' connection with the affair, his action here and his article in the Herald removes it all. We are now satisfied as to his standing, and it is certainly not good.

The Bloomington Bulletin says: "Gov. Cleveland's conduct during the excitement and uncertainties of the last two weeks has been as admirable and commendable as it was during the campaign. Indeed the demeanor of Gov. Cleveland stands in broad contrast with that of Mr. Blaine, who half dead with excitement, permitted himself to be made a fool of at the rate of thirty miles an hour," running from one doubtful state to another, begging, almost upon his knees, for votes. Only a few days ago, crazed with anxiety and childish rage, he capered in the air, declaring that he was elected, and would take his seat. Never before was a candidate for the great office of president of the United States presented such a pitiable and contemptible figure."

As we stated a few days ago, the people of the south have every reason to rejoice over the election of Cleveland and Hendricks. But they do not rejoice as southerners, but as Americans; not as citizens of Virginia or Alabama, but as citizens of the United States. The election of Cleveland intensifies the national feeling of the south. It has done more than anything else to make the war to make us feel that we are indeed part of a common country. All talk about the south capturing the capital is sheer nonsense. It has assisted in capturing the capital from the hands of the republican party, but it is not indifferent to the fact that the hard fighting has been done by the democratic and independent republicans of the north. The south, of course, will share in the fruits of victory, but it will make no exorbitant demands, it will not impede the work of reform by a clamor for spoils. If it does we shall be much disappointed.—[Mobile (Ala.) Register.]

The Republican reiterates its stand upon the democracy in yesterday's issue, but attempted to pare off the rough edges of its former article. The purpose of this is to show some little difference to local democrats. The feeling is still there. The feeling that the republican party alone can govern, and has the right to govern, this country still exists. It speaks of the joy among democrats of the south at democratic success. It forgets that the democrats of the north are heartily, if not more heartily rejoicing. They have been in the minority for many years, and it is natural that they should rejoice at the realization of their hopes. Has anyone heard of any more extravagant rejoicing than that of the republicans of Decatur for about six hours on Wednesday after the election? This was upon a mere rumor of success. No one thought of charging bad motives in this. We know our neighbors feel pretty sick over democratic success. But cheer up brethren. The country is safe. Your rebels are men of straw. The democracy will give you a better administration than you have had for years. Give your democratic neighbors credit for being as patriotic as yourself.

NOTHING TO FEAR.

MISSES Editors: Seeing in the columns of the republican papers such numerous and grave expressions of fear that the people of the south will take advantage of the new order of things—after the 4th of next month—I wish to give an extract from a letter received by me from Mr. John W. Kern, an eminent lawyer of Kokomo, Indiana, in August last, while he was sojourning at Botetourt Springs, Virginia. His letter was in reply to my inquiry as to the sentiment of the southern people, etc. He wrote:

"There are no indications of any trouble here in the event of a close election. We seldom hear politics discussed. The southern people have accepted the situation, and are struggling wonderfully to build up their country, educate their children, and spur the work of the war. There is no disloyalty here; neither is there anything but the kindest feeling toward the people of the whole country. The agitation is all in the north where you can find bad men, who regard their party as higher than country—those who are eternally howling rebel traitor—seemingly to forget that the war has been over nearly twenty years, and seeking to inflame the minds of the people against their own countrymen by appealing to their old hatred and passions, hoping thus to benefit their country but to strengthen their party at the expense of the welfare of the republic. It is the duty of the people—the common people—those who constitute the government—to ignore party lines, and to let down on viciousness in campaigns, and the party who seeks to attain power thereby."

I trust, Misses Editors, you will give the above a place in your columns, for I believe it to represent the honest sentiment of the southern heart, and because I deem it the duty of every right-minded person to contribute and do all in his power to drive this sectional hate and prejudice from our land forever.

John A. Hogan will be married—The General Assembly Democratic in both Houses.

Special to the Review
SPRINGFIELD, Ill., November 16—10 p.m.—Political circles are excited here to-night over the report from Chicago that the official count elects Brand to the state senate and that here is a further gain of one in the house. This will make the senate stand 26 democrats, 25 republicans. The house, 78 democrat, 75 republicans, giving a democratic majority of four on joint ballot. This will result in retiring Senator Logan, and will make an interesting contest for the United States senatorship among the various democratic aspirants.

TRAVELING ON FOOT.

From Village to Village in the Old Bay State.

Marblehead's Single Hotel—Jogging Along an Empty Hay-Cart—Perplexities of a Boarding House.

[Prentiss Mulford's Letter.]
I am traveling through a small part of Massachusetts on foot, "taking it easy" from town to town and village, and often starting out at noon with no idea where I may bring up at night. I am learning how little we may of the real country while we travel. The people of the state live on their country roads. The railroad generally runs by everybody's back door, and often far out of sight of that.

Last week I visited in this manner Salem, Marblehead, Peabody, North Reading, Reading, Woburn, Lexington and Concord. These places lie from ten to seventeen miles apart, and even the road between them, are not always the easiest to travel, and even the most direct route is not always the easiest to follow.

Salem seemed to me as one of those "finished" old towns very pretty to look at where all the fortunes have long since been made, where there is just room enough for so many people and no more, and where all the sons of families in moderate circumstances move away to "do better," and where last the daughters never marry, but die old maids.

Marblehead's single hotel being full from a theater company's visit, I found quarters at a boarding house. I liked that boarding house three times in all before finding a place to my taste. It would disappear suddenly, and after having safety for it for so long I would find it again turning up at any other. Getting into Peabody I found what in California would be called a "considerable place" with banks, street cars, handsome town halls, an imposing soldier's monument, wide streets, and rows of residences evidently indicating fortune, leisure and luxury. I had never heard of Peabody before. I presume that millions of the following citizens have never heard of Peabody. Let me Peabody feel hurt. His ignorance may be as profound regarding some "smart town" not 100 miles from Peabody. There are a great many people in this world—especially in Massachusetts.

From Peabody I traveled northward toward North Reading. I think the country must have met me that I was in Massachusetts, for I had been suddenly surrounded from above. Roads wide and well paved, pumpkins set out kitchen window sills to cool, and great old trees over shadowing roofs.

I found the roads called "streets" after leading miles into the country. I traveled on Lowell street nearly the whole distance from Peabody to North Reading.

Signs boards indicating the neighboring places, their directions and number of miles distant, are numerous both in town and country so that the foot traveler is never at a loss for his bearings.

A young man in an empty hay-cart asked me to ride. "If I could stand the cart" I jumped in. We jogged on. The young man lectured on that portion of Massachusetts "Onions and strawberries" he said, were the principal produce raised. Onions was a hard crop to raise. They were induced by two worthless peddlers, and very hard to keep fresh. Onions, I say, is a bad name for onions. One bushel of onions requires much work as a woman's work of minutes. Most of the young men hereabout went to Boston or to Lynn and worked at shoe-making. From Peabody I traveled northward toward North Reading. I think the country must have met me that I was in Massachusetts, for I had been suddenly surrounded from above. Roads wide and well paved, pumpkins set out kitchen window sills to cool, and great old trees over shadowing roofs.

And so from room to room. While our party is in the post office and hotel-rooms. I hear the sound of a lady who is evidently just beginning the tour with a company chanting the unchanged refrain word for word as our old lady did at that point, and as we descend to a narrow, crooked staircase, after seeing too long upper room which has the autograph of Sir Walter Scott cut upon the window pane we run against the third of the world sisters just as she is saying "But a poor place, ladies and gentlemen to shelter the king of intellects."

The Shakespeare house is like two houses, now that there is a partition-wall cutting it directly through the center from garret to cellar or ground floor which was put there when the poet's father met with reverses and rented part of the house as an inn.

This is now called the museum, wherein are collected the various relics of Shakespeare's family and a few interesting objects pertaining to his time, notably the form or dock from the village school, the post office attended and the house for the best, the house about Stratford as authentic. Lives and object is religiously guarded as something sacred, and in noticing this care and solicitude one cannot but bear the happy chance which awakened these sleepers of villages to a realization of the treasures in their midst.

The Acting Was Too Life-Like.

[Arkansas Traveler.]

Such incidents have been the turning point in the fortunes of more than one family. "You must excuse me, gentlemen for I cannot drink anything," said a man who was known to be entire town as drunkard.

I journeyed on to North Reading alone. There is a hotel at North Reading.

There is a hotel at North Reading.

After some trouble I found a private family to board me for the night, and I was obliged to pay my son pretty strongly to obtain such privilege and pay for it. At the front door the good woman of the house surveyed me critically through her spectacles and took my full measure before allowing me to enter.

"That's very true, but I am a very different man now."

"Preachers have a hold of you!"

"No sir, no one has said anything to me."

"Well, what has caused the change?"

"To tell you the truth I kept on having a cocktail as you term it, until I met a party of friends. When I left them I was about half drunk. To a man of my temperament half drunk is a miserable condition, for the desire for more is so strong that he forgets his self-respect in his efforts to get more drunk. I remembered that there was a half pint of whisky at home which had been purchased for medicinal purposes."

"Just before reaching the gate I heard voices in the garden, and looking over the fence, I saw my little son and daughter playing.

"No, you be me," said the boy, "and I'll be drunk. Wait now till I fill my bottle!"

"He took a bottle ran away and filled it with water. Pretty soon he returned and, entering the playhouse, called suddenly at the girl and sat down without saying anything. The girl looked up from her work and said,

"James, why did you do this way?"

"What's the matter?" he replied.

"Gettin' drunk."

"What's drunk?"

"You are, an you promised when the baby died you wouldn't drink any more."

The children were playing at the table while the old lady was preparing the meal. It was the only package present. She fished it there with an air which seemed to say, "City folk! Must have one, I suppose." I accepted the napkin and her robe of contempt.

She was ready. We "drew up." It was a hardened household. No grace professed the meal. The table talk was entirely local. Smith was looking now for Jenkins. Let him drink. Good man when sober, though wife sick. She was a Peasant before she married. Consumption, "Silence." After which one remarked, "Pretty bad thing to have been a Peasant." I accepted the napkin and her robe of contempt.

Breakfast was called at 6 in the morning. We did not break and talked over the illness of the Father, a near neighbor. She was a Peasant before marriage, her husband had been discharged from his station. Was a good man to work hard but died young.

The property owners on the west side of the old square from West Main street to the St. Nicholas, have already widened and improved their sidewalks in conformity with the ordinance recently passed. On the south side of the square, in front of Quinn & Seeforth's, Miller's and Rothfuss', and also on the west side of Armstrong's drug store, the walks will be lowered about a foot to be sides being widened. The contractors are making rapid progress with their paving, and unless seriously interfered with by the weather or delayed by the street car company, they will soon finish their part of the work.

The police received a telegram yesterday notifying them to be on the lookout for a brakeman from the south end of the P. D. & E., who was suspected of stealing a coat from engine 14 of that road while it was at Marion. The coat which probably belonged to the engineer or fireman contained fifty or sixty dollars. Officers Ringland and Andre spotted the suspected thief and the former followed him up town. He was finally taken in charge and told what was thought of him. He had a good sized valise with him and was perfectly willing that himself and property should be searched, but protested his innocence. The search was made, but no trace of the property found and consequently the brakeman was allowed to go on his way. He told the officer he guessed he would move out of this section of the country, having once pointed out to the sheriff of McLean county as an escaped jail bird.

The Century's war series was begun by a confederate contributor, Geo. Beanregard. In the next number Gen. Lew Wallace, of the federal army, will write of Fort Donelson.

In January, Rear-Admiral Walker will give his reminiscences of the Engagements of the Western Flotilla. Admiral Walker, it will be remembered, was commander of the Carondelet which fought at Belmont, Fort Henry, Fort Donelson, and elsewhere, and ran the batteries at Island Number Ten. Capt. James B. Eads (who built the gun-boat) will contribute to the same number a paper on "Recollections of Foote and the Gunters." Gen. Grant's "Shiloh" will appear in the February number, with a biographical sketch of Gen. Alvin Johnston, commander of the confederate forces at Shiloh, who was killed in that engagement, written by his son, Col. Wm. Preston Johnston. This article includes an account of the battle from a confederate point of view.

E. McEwen, a popular traveling dry goods salesman from St. Louis, was in the city yesterday securing orders for winter goods.

Mr. Winerick, of Troy, Ill., is in the city, being called here by the death of his sister, Mrs. Sutter. He is city marshal of Troy.

J. W. Hill, of Cincinnati, the expert, employed to test the new pump at the water works, is a guest at the New Denning.

Mrs. A. J. Kelly, Mrs. T. B. Johns and Mrs. John Morehead, who have been in the city several days, returned home to Terra Haute yesterday.

Robert Welch, the shipping clerk at D. W. Brennenman & Co.'s, is having a pair of ear bobs made for his brown ping hat. He may have to wear it all winter.

George Challis, the well known traveling boot and shoe salesman, who for many months made this city his home, was a guest at the St. Nicholas yesterday.

Charlie Boarman, the jolly traveling passenger agent of the "Old Reliable" Burling & St. Joe, was in the city yesterday. He says the company has already put its patent heat on the rule by which snow is melted as fast as it falls and the track is always kept clear. Charlie left on the west bound train immediately after making this statement. He is a good railroad man and is well liked in Decatur.

The Hanlons appeared at the opera house last evening in their popular Parisian absurdity in three acts, entitled "Le Voyage en Suisse," a trip to Switzerland. They were greeted by a good audience and for a couple of hours they enjoyed a fine treat. The Hanlons are by no means strangers in Decatur, but are popular favorites and are well received every time they visit here. Their acting last evening was fully up to the standard they have established, and in the second act the railroad collision was especially good, calling forth deserved applause. They play this evening at Ft. Wayne, for which city the departed last evening as soon as their entertainment was ended.

A Heavy Frost Checks the Ravages of Cholera in Paris—England Free of the Disease.

The Attitude of the British Government Toward the Franchise Bill Explained by Gladstone.

China's Defensive Preparations—Severe Floods in Syria—Composition of the German Reichstag.

GENERAL BUSINESS.

Paris, Nov. 18.—Owing to another heavy frost Sunday night the severe concurring effects are growing more formidable. From midnight on Sunday to six o'clock last evening there have been only seven deaths from cholera in the city and thirteen in the hospitals.

London, Nov. 18.—In the House of Commons, last evening, Mr. Gladstone made a speech with reference to the Franchise bill, in which he said the Government had expressed a desire to the constitutional authorities to defer to the action of the elected members in the several cities. He many they intended to appropriate toward preparing a grand welcome to the King on his return to the capital.

London, Nov. 18.—In a five-mile bicycle race Monday at Washington John S. Prince defeated Miss Edna Van Brumm, who was given a start of two minutes. The winner's time was 10 minutes and 45 seconds.

The Meidi is a radical tea-absorbing man, even to coffee and tobacco, which he won't even allow in his camp. He has a refugee one hundred and fifty lashes for smoking a cigarette.

For non-payment of a certain tax, Father Egan ejected an aged man, Dennis McCague, from church at Thorn Hill, Ont., Sunday. McCague's thigh was broken in the struggle, the nail and iron manufacturers of New Jersey, Pa., and Pennsylvania are selling their products in New England for less money than it costs the New England manufacturers to produce them.

Sergeant McCaffery has not authorized the statement that there will be no further bond calls at present, but the prison disbursements for December will probably consume the available surplus up to New Year's Day.

The Chinese have left the town of Lushun.

London, Nov. 18.—The Shanghai correspondent telegraph that foreigners there are treated by the French as though they were in the vicinity of that city. The effect upon trade is great disorder. The English are allowed to continue in the strength of the French squadron and the supplies of the English Government in neglecting to keep the English fleet nearly equal to the French, who are finished with success, and a collision sooner or later, is regarded as inevitable.

Caston, Nov. 18.—Upon the report being published here that General Gordon had been killed, the Chinese squadron hoisted flags at half-mast and fired salute guns. The garrison also paraded and fired a general volley in honor of his memory.
